London's Zuleika Gallery is delighted to announce Abstract Allies, an exhibition of abstract art, selected by celebrated collector Tim Sayer MBE and curator Lizzie Collins. The exhibition will be opened by former BBC radio news reader Charlotte Green at the Private View on Tuesday 5 March, and then runs from 6-29 March 2019.

Admission is free and all works are for sale.

Tim Sayer, who was a BBC Radio News journalist for 40 years, has been avidly collecting art since 1962 and recently he and his wife Annemarie Norton bequeathed their entire collection of over 700 works to The Hepworth Wakefield in West Yorkshire. Sir Nicholas Serota described the gift as "one of the most significant and generous donations to a regional gallery in the UK" and noted that it reflected the "discriminating eye of a person of modest means".

Abstract Allies includes the work of painters, sculptors and ceramicists such as Nadine Bell, Francis Aviva Blane, Willard Boepple, Martha Green Doran, Naum Gabo, Ander Gunn, Nigel Hall, Howard Hodgkin, Kathleen Hyndman, Kenneth Martin, George Meyrick, Marlow Moss, Susan Pye, Lucie Rie, Rebecca Salter, Sean Scully, Trevor Sutton, Manijeh Yadegar, Samuel Zealey, Fredericke von Cranach, Liz West, Graham Williams, Amelia Sampson.
